

Myron's Song (If I'm Only Human): A bell-like celesta represents the sweetness of the heavens; the mellow bouzouki represents the goodness of Earth; the synthesizer represents the eeriness of Hades' kingdom and of his longing for Persephone. This is Myron contemplating, for the first time, what it means to be a mere mortal and his realization that it's not only what the gods in the heavens feel that matters. On the chorus, Myron's voice is bolstered by the violin and by the choristers Happy and Sad!
